

GOR

Old goodman Dobson of the green, Remembers he the trees has seen.
Go'odness, n. f. [from good.] Desirable qualities either moral or physical; kindness; favour.
If for any thing he loved greatness, it was because therein he might exercise his goodness.
There is in all things an appetite or desire, whereby they incline to something which they may be; all which perfections are contained under the general name of goodness.
Hooker.

All goodness
Is poison to thy stomach.

—Yes, that goodness.

Of gleaming all the land's wealth into one,
Into your own hands, cardinal, by extortion:

The goodness of your intercepted packets
You writ to the pope against the king; your goodness, Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious. Sh. H. VIII.

There's no goodness in thy face. Shak. Ant. and Cleopatra.
The goodness of every thing is measured by its end and use, and that's the best thing which serves the best end and purpose.

All severally made him very particular relations of the strength of the Scots army, the excellent discipline that was observed in it, and the goodness of the men.

No body can say that tobacco of the same goodness is risen in respect of itself: one pound of the same goodness will never exchange for a pound and a quarter of the same goodness. Locke.

Goods, n. f. [from good.]

1. Moveables in a house.

That a writ be fud' against you,

To forfeit all your goods, lands, tenements,
Cattles, and whatsoever.

2. Wares; freight; merchandise.

Her majesty, when the goods of our English merchants were attached by the duke of Alva, arrested likewise the goods of the Low Dutch here in England.

Sallee, that scorn'd all pow'r and laws of men,
Goods with their owners hurrying to their den.

Go'odv. n. f. [corrupted from good wife.] A low term of civility used to mean persons.

Soft, goody sheep, then said the fox, not so;
Unto the king so rash ye may not go.

Swarm'd on a rotten stick the bees I spy'd,
Which erst I saw when goody Dobson dy'd.

Plain goody would no longer down;
'Twas madam in her grogram gown.

GOOSE, n. f. plural geese. [gor, Saxon; gees, Dutch; gawe, Erse, sing. gewey, plural.]

1. A large waterfowl proverbially noted, I know not why, for foolishness.

Thou cream-faced lown,

Where got'st thou that goose look?
Since I pluckt geese, play'd truant, and whipt top, I knew not what 'twas to be beaten 'till lately.

Smile you my speeches, as I were a fool?
Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain,

I'd drive ye cackling home to Comelot.
Birds most easy to be drawn are waterfowl; as the geese and swan.

Nor watchful dogs, nor the more wakeful geese,
Disturb with nightly noise the sacred peace.

2. A taylor's smoothing iron.

Come in, taylor: here you may roast your goose.
Go'oseberr. n. f. [from goose and berr, because eaten with young geese as sauce.]

The leaves are lacinated or jagged: the whole plant is set with prickles: the fruit grows dispersedly upon the tree, having for the most part but one fruit upon a footstalk, which is of an oval or globular figure, containing many small seeds, fur-rounded by a pulpy substance. The species are, 1. The common gooseberry. 2. The large manured gooseberry. 3. The red hairy gooseberry. 4. The large white Dutch gooseberry.
5. The large amber gooseberry. 6. The yellow-leaved gooseberry. 7. The large red gooseberry. 8. The yellow-leaved gooseberry. 9. The striped-leaved gooseberry.

August has upon his arm a basket of all manner of ripe fruits; as pears, plums, apples, gooseberries.
Upon a gooseberry bush a snail I found;

For always snails near sweetest fruit abound.

Go'osefoot, n. f. [from goose and foot.] Wild orch.

The seeds are single and globose in some species; but in others they are compressed: the cup of the flower is quinquefid:
the leaves grow alternately upon the stalks between the seeds.

Go'osegrass, n. f. Clivers; an herb. See CLIVERS.

Go'osegrape, or wild tansy, is a weed that strong clays are very subject to.

Go'orbelly, n. f. [from gor, dung, and belly, according to Skinner and Junius.] It may perhaps come from gor, Welsh, beyond, too much; or, as seems to me more likely, may be contracted from gormand, or gormand's belly, the belly of a glutton.] A big paunch; a swelling belly. A term of reproach for a fat man.

GOR

Go'rbellied, adj. [from gorbelly.] Fat; bigbellied; having swelling paunches.

Hang ye, gorbellied knaves, are you undone? No, ye fat chuffs, I would your store were here. Shak. Henry IV. p. i.

GORD, n. f. An instrument of gaming, as appears from Bianmont and Fletcher.

Thy dry bones can reach at nothing now, but gords and ninepins.

Let vultures gripe thy guts; for gords and Fulham holds, Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.

GORE, n. f. [from gor, Saxon; gor, Welsh, famous matter.]

1. Blood.

A grievous wound,
From which forth gush'd a stream of gor blood thick,

That all her goodly garment stain'd around,
And into a deep sanguine dy'd the grassy ground. F. Queen.

Another's crimes the youth unhappy bore,
Glutting his father's eyes with guiltless gor. Dryden's Ann.

2. Blood clotted or congealed.

The bloody fact
Will be aveng'd; though here thou see him die,
Rolling in dust and gor.

His horrid beard and knotted tresses flow'd
Stiff with his gor, and all his wounds ran blood. Danham.

To GORE, v. a. [from gor, Saxon.]

1. To stab; to pierce.

Oh, let no noble eye profane a tear
For me, if I be gor'd with Mowbray's spear. Shak. R. II.

No weaker lion's by a stronger slain;
Nor from his larger tusks the forest boar

Communion takes his brother swine to gor. Tate's Juven.
For arms his men long pikes and jav'lines bore,
And poles with pointed steel their foes in battle gor. Dryd.

2. To pierce with a horn.

Some tof's'd, some gor'd, some trampling down he kill'd.
Dryden's Preface to the Conquest of Granada.

He idly butting, feigns
His rival gor'd in every knotty trunk. Thomson's Spring.

GORGE, n. f. [from gor, French.]

1. The throat; the swallow.

There were birds also made so finely, that they did not only deceive the fight with their figures, but the hearing with their songs, which the watry instruments did make their gorge deliver.

And now how abhorred in my imagination it is! my gorge rises at it. Shakespeare's Hamlet.

Her delicate tenderness will find itself abused, begin to heave the gorge, dissemble and abhor the Moor. Shak. Othello.

2. That which is gorged or swallowed.

And all the way, most like a brutish beast,
He sped up his gorge, that all did him detest. Fa. Queen.

To GORGE, v. u. [from gorger, French.]

1. To fill up to the throat; to glut; to satiate.

Thou detestable maw, thou womb of death,
Gorg'd with the dearest morsel of the earth. Sh. Ro. and Jul.

Being with his presence glutted, gor'd, and full. Shak.
He that makes his generation mellow,
To gorge his appetite.

Gorge with my blood thy barbarous appetite. Dryden.
I must therefore desire, that they will not gorge him either with nonsense or obscenity.

Nor would his slaughter'd army now have lain
On Africk's sands, disfigur'd with their wounds.

To gorge the wolves and vultures of Numidia. Addis. Can.
The giant, gor'd with flesh, and wine, and blood,
Lay stretcht at length, and snoring in his den. Addis.

2. To swallow: as, the fish has gorged the book.

GORGEOUS, adj. [from gorgeus, old French. Skinner.] Fine; splendid; glittering in various colours; showy; magnificent.

O, that deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous palace! Shak. Romeo and Juliet.

As full of spirit as the month of May,
And gorgeous as the sun at Midsummer. Shak. Hen. IV.

He had them look upon themselves and upon their enemies themselves dreadful, their enemies gorgeous and brave. Hayes.

The gorgeous East, with richest hand,
Pours on her kings barbaric pearl and gold. Milton.

With gorgeous wings, the marks of foreign sway,
The two contending princes make their way. Dryd. Virgil.

Go'rgiously, adv. [from gorgeous.] Splendidly; magnificently; finely.

The duke, one solemn day, gorgeously clad in a suit all over spread with diamonds, lost one of them of good value. Wotton.

Go'rgousness, n. f. [from gorgeous.] Splendour; magnificence; show.

Go'rgett, n. f. [from gorge.] The piece of armour that defends the throat.

He with a pally fumbling on his gorgett,
Shakes in and out the rivet. Shak. Troilus and Cressida.

GOS

He did oftentimes spend the night in the church alone praying, his headpiece, gorget, and gauntlets lying by him.

See how his gorget peers above his gown,
To tell the people in what danger he was. Ben. John. Cat.

About his neck a threefold gorget,
As rough as trebled leathern target. Hudibras, p. i. cant. 2.

Go'rgon, n. f. [from γεργών.] A monster with snaky hairs, of which the sight turned beholders to stone; any thing ugly or horrid.

Gorgon and hydras, and chimera's dire. Milton.

Why did'st thou not encounter man for man,
And try the virtue of that gorgon face

To stare me into stature. Dryden.

GORMAND, n. f. [from gormand, French.] A greedy eater; a ravenous luxurious feeder.

To GORMANDIZE, v. n. [from gormand.] To eat greedily;
to feed ravenously.

GORMANDIZER, n. f. [from the verb.] A voracious eater.

GORSE, n. f. [from gor, Saxon.] Furz; a thick prickly shrub that bears yellow flowers in winter.

Go'ry, adj. [from gor.]

1. Covered with congealed blood.

When two boars with rankling malice met,
Their gory sides the fresh wounds fiercely fret.

Thou dost thou shake thy gory locks at me?
Thou can't not say I did it. Shak. Macbeth.

2. Bloody; murderous; fatal. Not in use.

The obligation of our blood forbids
A gory emulation 'twixt us twain. Shak. Troil. and Cressida.

Go'shawk, n. f. [from gor, goole, and hawk.] A hawk of a large kind.

Such dread his awful visage on them cast;
So seem poor doves at go'shaws flight aghast. Fairfax, b. iii.

Go'sling, n. f. [from goose.]

1. A young goose; a goose not yet full grown.

Why do you go nodding and wagging so like a fool, as if you were hipshot? says the goose to her go'sling. L'Estrange.

Nature hath instructed even a brood of go'slings to stick together, while the kite is hovering over their heads. Swift.

2. A cat's tail on nut-trees and pines.

GOSPEL, n. f. [from gospel, or God's or good tidings; εὐαγγέλιον; gospel, gospel, happy tidings, Erse.]

1. God's word; the holy book of the Christian revelation.

Thus may the gospel to the rising sun
Be spread, and flourish where it first begun.

How is a good Christian animated and cheered by a steadfast belief of the promises of the gospel! Bentley's Sermons.

2. Divinity; theology.

To GOSPEL, v. n. [from the noun.] To fill with sentiments of religion. This word in Shakespeare, in whom alone I have found it, is used, though so venerable in itself, with some degree of irony: I suppose from the gospellers, who had long been held in contempt.

Are you to gospel d
To pray for this good man, and for his issue, Whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave? Shak. Sp.

Go'speller, n. f. [from gospel.] A name of the followers of Wickliff, who first attempted a reformation from popery, given them by the Papists in reproach, from their professing to follow and preach only the gospel.

These gospellers have had their golden days,
Have trodden down our holy Roman faith. Rowe's J. Shore.

Go'ssamer, n. f. [from gossamer, low Latin.] The down of plants; the long white cobwebs which fly in the air in calm funny weather, especially about the time of Autumn. Hammer.

A lover may belidre the gossamer,
That idles in the wanton Summer air,
And yet not fall, so light is vanity. Shak. Rom. and Juliet.

Had'st thou been aught but gossamer, feathers, air,
So many fathom down precipitating,
Thou'd'st shiver'd like an egg.

Four nimble gnats the horses were,
Their harnesses of gossamer. Shak. King Lear.

The filmy gossamer now flits no more,
Nor halcyons bask on the short sunny shore. Dryd. Virgil.

Go'ssip, n. f. [from gob and ryb, relation, affinity, Saxon.]

1. One who answers for the child in baptism.

Go to a gossip's feast and gaud with me,
After so long grief such nativity;

—With all my heart, I'll gossip at this feast. Shak.peare.

At the christening of George duke of Clarence, who was born in the castle of Dublin, he made both the earl of Kildare and the earl of Ormond his gossips. Davies on Ireland.

2. A timpling companion.

And sometimes lurk I in a gossip's bowl,
In very likeness of a roasted crab,

And when she drinks against her lips I bob. Shak.peare.

3. One who runs about tattling like women at a lying-in.

To do the office of a neighbour,
And be a gossip at his labour. Hudibras, p. ii. cant. 1.

'Tis sung in ev'ry street,
The common chat of gossips when they meet. Dryden.

GOV

To Go'ssip, v. n. [from the noun.]

1. To chat; to prate; to be merry.

Go to a gossip's feast and gaud with me.
—With all my heart, I'll gossip at this feast. Shak.peare.

His mother was a votress of my order,
And, in the spiced Indian air by night,

Full often bath the gossip by my side. Shak.peare.

The market and exchange must be left to their own ways of talking; and gossippings not be robbed of their ancient privilege. Locke.

2. To be a pot-companion.

Nor met with fortune, other than at feasts,
Full warm of blood, of mirth, of gossipping. Shak. K. John.

Go'ssippied, n. f. [from gossipping, from gossip.]

Gossippied or compaternity, by the canon law, is a spiritual affinity; and the juror, that was gossip to either of the parties, might, in former times, have been challenged as not indifferent. Davies on Ireland.

Go'sting, n. f. An herb.

Got, pret. [from the verb get.]

Titus Lartius writes, they fought together; but Aufidius got off. Shak.peare's Coriolanus.

If you have strength Achilles' arms to bear, Though foul Therites got thee, thou shalt be Lov'd and esteem'd. Dryden's Juvenal.

These regions and this realm my wars have got;
This mournful empire is the loser's lot. Dryd. Innocent.

When they began to reason about the means how the sea got thither, and away back again, there they were presently in the dark. Woodward's Natural History.

Got, part. pass. of get.

Solyman commended them for their valour in their evil haps, in a plot so well by them laid, more than he did the victory of others got by good fortune, not grounded upon any good reason. Knolles's History of the Turks.

Let him boast
His knowledge of good lost, and evil got. Milt. Par. Lost.

A gentle persuasion in reasoning, when the first point of submission to your will is got, will most times do. Locke.

If he behaves himself so when he depends on us for his daily bread, can any man say what he will do when he is got above the world? Arbutnot's History of John Bull.

Thou wert from Aetna's burning entrails torn,
Got by fierce whirlwinds, and in thunder born. Pope.

Go'tten, part. pass. of get.

Wisdom cannot be gotten for gold. Job. xxviii. 15.

Few of them, when they are gotten into an office, apply their thoughts to the execution of it. Temple.

Goud, n. f. Woad: a plant. Dist.

Gove, n. f. A mow. Tusser.

To Gove, v. n. To mow; to put in a gove, goff, or mow.
An old word.

Load safe, carry home, follow time being fair,
Gove just in the barn, it is out of despair. Tuss. Husbandry.

To GOVERN, v. a. [from governor, French; gubernare, Latin.]

1. To rule as a chief magistrate.

This inconvenience is more hard to be redressed in the governor than the governed; as a malady in a vital part is more incurable than in an external. Spenser on Ireland.

Slaves to our passions we become, and then
It grows impossible to govern men. Waller.

2. To regulate; to influence; to direct.
